SAN FRANCISCO'S NEW PRIMARY.

On the First Test Crocker Named For Mayor.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—The first public trial of the new direct primary law was made in this city Tuesday, when candidates for the November municipal election were selected. W. A. Crocker, the candidate of the Business Men's Committee, received the Republican nomination for mayor over Byron Mauser, the independent Republican candidate. Charles M. Fickert, candidate of the regular Republicans for district attorney will represent that party at the coming election, although many Republicans wrote in the name of Francis J. Heney in the blank provided for the purpose. Both factions of the Democracy left the district attorney nomination blank and incomplete returns indicate Fickert has a slight lead over Heney.

ORANGE

Death on Track of Robert Farr, Formerly Resident of Orange.

The death of Robert Farr, formerly of this town, at Newington, Conn., is told in the following newspaper clipping:

"Newington, Aug. 14.—Robert Farr, known here as Robert Plumley, was instantly killed by the 3:10 dinky, Friday afternoon, at the private crossing of Mr. L. Stoddard, south of the passenger station. Farr was crossing the tracks when three down trains were at the place at the same time. A freight had switched onto the up track to allow the express to pass and was standing there. The boy went around the end of the freight, waiting for the express, which thundered by, leaving a cloud of dust and smoke, and probably did not see or hear the dinky, before which he jumped and by which he was thrown a few feet into the ditch. One leg and arm were broken, but death was instantaneous, as the neck was broken.

"Farr wore a pair of eyeglasses, which were not injured. He lived with Mr. and Mrs. Poel Plumley (Mr. Plumley being his own uncle). He was the youngest child of the late Almira and Phylinda Farr of Newcomb, N. Y. He leaves three brothers, Will, Oscar and Walter; also three sisters, Mrs. Mary Dightman, Addie and Susan Farr. He was a member of the Congregational Sunday school, and a worker for its interests; and also a member of the King's Daughters and Sons.

"Medical Examiner Wright of New Britain viewed the remains and gave permit for its removal.

"The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30, from the house. Interment in Oak cemetery.

"Newington, Aug. 16.—The funeral of Robert Farr was attended from the home of his uncle, Joel Plumley, at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Herbert Macy officiated. A quartet consisting of Mrs. Martha Bell, Mrs. Nellie Francis, John H. Fish and H. L. Kellogg, sang two selections. The hearse was Edward Starr, Arthur Francis, Kent Stoddard and Lee Darling. There was a great profusion of flowers. Among them was a set piece in the shape of a cross from the circle, of which the deceased was a member. At the grave the circle also sang, 'Bless Be The Tie That Binds,' and scattered flowers on the grave. Friends were present from Burnside. Interment was in the Center cemetery.

The Washington Good Templars will hold a promenade in the town hall in this place, Friday evening, Aug. 20. Come and have a good time. Admission 10 cents.

PERFECT CONFIDENCE

Barre People Have Good Reason for Complete Reliance.

Do you know how—
To find quick relief from backache;
To correct distressing urinary ills;
To surely cure sick kidneys;
Just one way—your neighbors know—

Have used Doan's Kidney Pills;
Have proved their worth in many tests.
Here's Barre testimony.

Mrs. Daniel Ryan, 51 West street, Barre, Vt., says: "Time has not changed my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. Several years ago I was hardly able to do my housework on account of kidney trouble. I had severe pains in my back, headaches and terrible attacks of dizziness. My kidneys were in such a weakened condition that any cold I caught settled in them and aggravated the trouble. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and sent my daughter to E. A. Doan's drug store for a box. This remedy proved to be the one I needed and I had not taken it long when the backache ceased and the other symptoms of my trouble gradually disappeared. I know Doan's Kidney Pills to be a splendid remedy for any trouble arising from the kidneys and will never tire of recommending them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

CONUNDRUMS.

As These Are Riddles of Life They Are Unanswerable.

Why is it that just when you're dreaming of leading a forlorn hope to victory or rescuing terrified women from a burning ship some dog or other gives a sudden bark at your heels and you jump half out of your boots?

Why is it that just as you think you are going to get the most charming spouse man ever wooed something goes wrong and you get a remarkably superstitious sister instead?

Why is it that just as you're getting everything into shape to have some fun in life you eat toaststools or fall down a coal cellar?

Why is it that just when you've got a dead sure thing to prophesy about and astonish the natives a miracle happens and it goes the other way?

Why is it that just when you're starting out to show some other fellow how to ride the bicycle the pedal always slips and over you go on the side of your head?

Why is it that just when you're picturing yourself as the guide and counselor of a mighty nation your wife goes through your overcoat pocket and finds an unposted letter two weeks old?

Why is it that just when you want this you get that and just when you get that you want this?

Why is it that just when you don't want to do anything you've got to do everything and just when you want to do everything you've got to do nothing?

Why is it that just when you hold your tongue you ought to have talked straight ahead and just when you talk straight ahead everybody else wishes you'd hold your tongue?
In short, why is it we live in this world instead of some other, and why is it we're not somebody else instead of ourselves and ourselves something else instead of being anybody?
Heaven knows; I don't.—Brooklyn Life.

"That may be my friend, but I'd rather be here being stuffed with peanuts than over in Africa being stuffed for a museum exhibit."

A SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS.

The writer returned a short time ago from a trip through a number of western states in which he investigated first hand the conditions under which fruit is grown in the famous Hood river, Rogue river and Yakima valleys. A conviction which was forced upon him was that if fruit growers in some other parts of the country, especially central and eastern states, were as well organized, cared for their orchards as scientifically and painstakingly as growers in the valleys mentioned a long step would be taken toward putting fruit production on a satisfactory and remunerative basis. It is true that soil and climatic conditions especially favor the owner of the western fruit ranch, but these are only partial factors in his success, as is demonstrated by the fact that some who live in these favored districts are making little or no profit because their ranches are not being managed as they ought to be, either through lack of inclination or ability, or both. A feature which contributes much toward successful fruit growing in Oregon and Washington and some other western states is the fact that the spraying of fruit trees to keep in check insect and fungous pests is made compulsory by state laws, which empower the state fruit inspector or his assistants to spray or cut down any trees which the owner cannot or will not spray. These regulations mean a reduction of insect and fungous pests to a minimum, the benefit of which to the fruit growing interests being almost incalculable. Another respect in which the western fruit growers have an advantage is in the admirable way in which they are organized in associations whose purpose is to promote the interest of the grower in a general way and in particular to give him helpful suggestion in the growing of his crops and also in the matter of packing his fruit and finding a satisfactory and reliable market for it. In the case of the Hood River association all fruit belonging to members of the association is sold collectively, representatives of houses which would like to handle it being on hand to bid for it. If the prices offered are not deemed reasonable by the executive board the boxed fruit is placed in their own big cold storage warehouses to await a more favorable market. Much of their success is explained when it is said that in these primary business, and quite naturally, having their all at stake, they take sensible precautions to see that they are not defrauded or hoodwinked at any stage of the game. The care they give their trees and the pains they take in packing and marketing their fruit may well be called the premium which they pay on an insurance policy which guarantees them success, and they don't wait until their orchards are broken down and weakened by disease before they take out the policies.

SPRAYING DANDELIONS.

A number of towns in the mountain states—Denver and Colorado Springs have come to our notice particularly—have of late been experiencing a veritable pest of dandelions, this pestiferous intruder having trespassed to the point where lawns in private lots and public parks and boulevards have had to be stripped of sod, respaved and reseeded to get rid of them. And this process has to be repeated at intervals, for the most carefully kept grass plots will become fouled with the seed from adjoining lots. An aid in fighting this dandelion pest seems to have been found in spraying affected lawns early in the season, just as the plants are starting, with a solution of iron sulphate, which has been found effective in destroying a number of noxious or troublesome weeds, but does not injure the tender grass. This plan involves some work and expense, but it is simpler than the methods previously mentioned and should be given a thorough trial.

A REMARKABLE FACULTY.

While the reasoning faculty as usually understood seems to be largely lacking in animals, their sense of sight, hearing and smell seems to be even more acute than with human beings, as is also their sense of place and direction. Familiar instances showing this last faculty, which seems to transcend the faculties of both sight and smell, are the migratory flight of wild fowl, the everyday movement of bees from field to hive, the return of the homing pigeon, the ability of the northern seal to find the narrow opening of its home after going miles for food in darkest seas under thick ice, the return of a cat or dog taken miles from home in box or sack and that common case of the ability of the old family horse to find the road home on a pitch dark night when the driver is hopelessly fuddled. These dumb brutes that are entirely subservient to man's will and reason nevertheless outstrip him in this wonderful trait.

He has achieved a large measure of success as a citizen and man who has been thoughtful and considerate in his own home and a kind neighbor.

Just about as much can be expected of boys and girls as from a newly set orchard if both are started and then allowed to shift for themselves. The old Harry in the shape of weeds and ill manners, herders and bad habits is sure to get them. No slightest or absentee oversight will give satisfactory results.

It pays an owner in dollars to give his buildings a good coat of paint and make the premises shipshape if he is contemplating selling. It will give just as large a return in chunks of solid satisfaction for himself and family if he isn't thinking of selling. Especially is such improvement of the place to be commended from the standpoint of the passerby.

In most states the law as to fences requires a railroad to provide its right of way with a fence of the kind which the farmer has or may want to erect adjacent thereto. To illustrate, if a landowner wishes to fence hog tight a tract of land bordering on the right of way, the railroad would have to erect a fence of this description on the line bordering such tract.

Some ingenious poultryman has lately devised a house proof henroost, the base of the iron castings at either end of the roost resting in a receptacle containing a strong disinfecting fluid. This would seem to be effective enough in preventing lice and vermin from crawling up the roosts to the hens, but would hardly serve to keep them from crawling from the hens on to the roosts and thus being spread.

During the recent stress of harvest time out in Nebraska many a young woman has followed the binder and helped shock the golden grain, and this was entirely to her credit, just as much so as it was to the discredit of the husky chaps who loafed around town and didn't work because, in addition to generous wages, they weren't taken to and from town every night in a leather cushioned automobile after the day's work was done.

The proper time for cutting the corn crop for fodder or ensilage is when the ears, leaves and stalk contain a maximum of nutritive value. If the corn ripens under normal conditions, this will be when the ear has begun to dent and is quite firm and if picked would make a good feed and seed ear, while the upper leaves of the plant are green, with the lower turning yellow. Cut before this time, there is a distinct loss in food value, just as there is a loss if the fodder is not cut before a frost kills the leaves.

If the little helper has calved earlier than was good for her own development, much can be done to make amends and help her attain a normal growth by giving her a good grain ration for eight or ten months after calving, even if she is on good pasture. If she is the kind of milkster she ought to be, she will only appropriate as much of this extra ration as she needs for growth and will put the rest in the pail. Handling her in this way is not coddling her, but simply an evidence of farsighted management.

If there is any one night more than another that is calculated to arouse the wrath and disgust of a fairly industrious and respectable citizen it is during the seasons of tilting and carting for the great crops of the country, and particularly at harvest time, when labor is at a premium, to see great strapping, hulking boys and men loafing around the depots and streets in most any town, utterly indifferent to the urgency of the situation, causing Providence and the government for their ill luck, with the chances good that they are eating three square meals a day earned by hardworking mothers and wives over washbasin and sewing machine. The law doesn't reach this type of offenders against common decency, and pity 'tis that it does not.

It will be well to feed the hogs sparingly of the new corn, as the inj
